The way you register to vote is changing. It only takes a few minutes, and will mean you can vote at elections. You need to provide us with this information; if you don’t you could be fined £80. Please send us this information in the next 28 days.

The open register

There are two registers. Why?

Using information received from the public, registration officers keep two registers – the electoral register and the open register (also known as the edited register).

The electoral register

The electoral register lists the names and addresses of everyone who is registered to vote in public elections. The register is used for electoral purposes, such as making sure only eligible people can vote. It is also used for other limited purposes specified in law, such as:

- Detecting crime (e.g. fraud)
- Calling people for jury service
- Checking credit applications

The open register

The open register is an extract of the electoral register, but is not used for elections. It can be bought by any person, company or organisation. For example, it is used by businesses and charities to confirm name and address details.

Your name and address will be included in the open register unless you ask for them to be removed. You can do this whilst completing your registration application by ticking the appropriate box (this is available both on paper application forms and online) or at any point after you have registered by emailing electoral.services@croydon.gov.uk. Removing your details from the open register does not affect your right to vote.

You can find more information about both registers and how they may be used at www.gov.uk/register-to-vote.

Your personal information

We will only use the information you give us for electoral purposes. We will look after your personal information securely and we will follow the Data Protection Act 1998. We will not give personal information about you and the other people in your household to anyone else or another organisation unless we have to by law.
